AMERICAN INTERVENTION SEEMS TO BE INEVITABLE

Havana, Sept. 26.—All the members of the cabinet and the heads of departments have presented their resignations to President Palma. He has accepted them, but the officers will retain their positions until the resignation of the president has been presented to congress.

It is declared on very high authority that American intervention in Cuba is certain. Furthermore, it is expected that the proclamation of intervention will be issued from Oyster Bay.

The Cuban republic stands on the verge of a second period of American intervention. The moderate party, which six weeks ago was in absolute control of every office in the national provincial and municipal, determined to abdicate everything and compel the United States to intervene.

In fact every government official from President Palma down is sincerely anxious to force such intervention rather than yield to any one of the terms offered by the liberal party those in arms against the government.

The liberal leaders characterize the conduct of the government as treason to the republic, while secretary of Taft regards it as an unwarranted and dishonorable attempt to force the hand of United States into intervention. This, it has been stated, is precisely ing of unrest and there appears nothing whatever to promise relief save full control by the United States.

LOGICAL PLATFORM FOR A REPUBLICAN NOMINEE

Oklahoma City, Sept. 26.—Henry Asp is telling the people of Guthrie that he wrote the platform that was adopted by the convention that nominated him for delegate to the constitutional convention. In view of the services Asp rendered his company in defeating all bills in the legislature of Oklahoma that was introduced for the purpose of relieving the people of the rate robbery that has been carried on for years, it would appear that the following revision will appeal to the people:

We, Henry E. Asp and the Sante Fe railway convention assembled do hereby declare that we favor a railroad and ware house commission to be elected by the people with full power to prevent us from looting the people by charging exorbitant rates. Of course we have always opposed such laws heretofore, and Mr. Asp has been able to prevent them passing the legislature of Oklahoma, but if you will let us write the constitution we will provide for those things.

We favor a law that will prevent us from discriminating or giving rebates to our special favorites in business. We have not been in favor of this before, but as something is going to be done, we want you to let us do it, and we promise anything along these lines.

We are in favor of railroads being compelled to charge the same freight and fare to every citizen and community. Of course we are not doing it now. It is true we are charging 28 cent rate on wheat from Guthrie to Galveston while at the same time we are only charging Kansas City 12 cents to the same point. We have been asked by the farmers to reduce the rate, but there being no law to compel us, we cannot do it.

We favor a provision to prevent us from owning, either directly or indirectly, coal lands, or to operate coal lands in the state. We have our own coal mines in Colorado, and if we can fix it so the other roads cannot buy the coal lands in this state, we can still have a cinch on making people buy our coal on our lines where there is no competition.

We favor an employer's liability law which will be just both to capital and labor. It is true that Mr. Asp defeated the fellow servant law introduced in the last legislature by Mr. Noffsinger, but we will have to do something along that line, and we would rather do it ourselves than to have some one else do it for us. There are many other things we will have to do, and we promise anything you ask for if you will only send us to the constitutional convention. The Democrats are advocating the initiative and referendum, and we are willing to promise anything to keep that out of the constitution. We are afraid Henry will lose out entirely if that measure goes into the constitution, and we will be at the mercy of the people.

P. S. We are in favor of an organic law that will leave in the people themselves full power and freedom to control the state in the interest of all the people all the time. We came very nearly forgetting that.

ARMED NEGROES ARRESTED AND PEACE IS RESTORED

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 26.—The known dead, who have met death in connection with the riots here since last Saturday night, number one white man and eighteen negroes.

The main events during yesterday were the ordering into the city of four companies of state militia from outside points, Gov. Terrell saying that the order was given as a matter of precaution rather than from any pressing necessity. The gathering of a large representation of business and professional men at noon called for vigorous action by the city executive regarding negro dives and saloons. Resolutions demanded that these places be closed and kept closed perpetually.

In these demands the leading members of the negro clergy united, promising their support of all measures for the common good and their influence with their own people.

One negro was killed at Brownville by the militia in the morning while trying to break through the lines. Two hundred and fifty-seven negroes have already been placed under arrest in Brownville. The majority of them were heavily armed. One other negro tried to get away and was shot.

The raid started shortly after 5 o'clock. The negroes were searched for arms and every one found to be armed.

Following the arrest of 257 negroes at Brownville, which includes Clark University, early in the day and the detention of about 100 of these in the county jail, the feeling prevailed that at last peace had been restored by a strong show of authority.

A Fast Afternoon.

Tuesday afternoon Broadway was a fast track despite the rough spots. First, Joe Harrington gave a thrilling exhibition of horsemanship riding a fiery, untamed, young bay. The beast did some terrific bucking and plunging, but Joe stayed on. Once he lost the reins, and onlookers cringed as the horse plunged wildly down the street. However Joe dexterously recovered the reins and took control once more. It was a genuine performance, one superior to the average wild west performance; but on the streets such exhilarating sport is a bit dangerous to life, limb and property.

Later Ingram's milk wagon team got tired of waiting at Chapman's hotel and terrorized the business section by taking a whirlwind spin down Broadway to the Frisco. The wagon's contents were dumped early in the run and other vehicles in the path narrowly escaped disastrous collision. After making a circuit of several blocks the team was caught on Main and no serious damage was reported. It is said the milk man is offering some bargains in milk shakes.

Drivers might do well to try unhitching the traces or hitching the horses.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

PREPOSTEROUS.

Desperate indeed is getting the attitude of the Republican party in the new state. Republicans observe the honest men of all classes and sections—those who sincerely desire a government which will protect the people—flocking to the Democratic standard; they see The Democratic headquarters doing a noble and effective work enlightening the people on the issues of the campaign and courageously exposing Republican corruption; then observing the corresponding decline and disintegration of the G. O. P. the leaders, filled with envy and chagrin, get frenzied in their impetuosity.

In a desperate effort to counteract the repeated exposure of the G. O. P.'s intimacy with the corporate interests they are now declaring the big expenses of maintaining our Democratic Headquarters and various speakers in the field are paid by the Standard Oil Company, that Standard oil is in league with the Democratic leaders to seize control of the new state. How palpably false, how ridiculous! And such an accusation to be found in the columns of the Oklahoma State Capital, the organ of the Santa Fe Railroad! Children now know that the interests of Standard oil and of the railroad trust are one. Does it stand to reason that they would fight each other in politics? The Republican party, both in the Territories and in the nation at large, has long been monopoly's trusted pal in perfidy. It is ridiculously illogical that there should come any rupture of relations at this time.

As to the source of the Democratic campaign fund, it has been made plain that it is made up of the voluntary contributions of the honest, toiling masses. Democratic speakers are holding meetings throughout the two territories and having contributions taken to pay the legitimate expense of conducting our great crusade for righteous government. Strict account of contributions are kept at Oklahoma City, where at any time the skeptical and suspicious may inspect to his satisfaction. Those who wish are contributing to this fund are expecting no return, no special privileges or immunities. All they want is a fair and equal chance, and this with reason they expect if they succeed in placing the Democratic party in power.

THE SORT OF MAN WANTED.

The Times takes pleasure in publishing in another column an interesting extract from a speech recently delivered in Ada. It is of interest to voters in the 87th district. The speech was made by Carlton Weaver, candidate for the Democratic nomination for delegate.

Editorially the Ada Democrat had urged that a candidate should be selected who would look after the "material interests of Ada." Replying thereto before an audience of his home town, Weaver boldly declared that he placed the interest of the whole district far above the local ambitions of the town of Ada.

Such an utterance, under the circumstances, required sublime courage. It is such courage as must excite the admiration of every patriotic Democrat. That's the sort of man we want, one broad enough in his sympathies to put first and foremost the vital interests of all the people. That's the sort of man the people will nominate next Tuesday.—Mill Creek Times.

ALL SHOULD WORK TOGETHER

At the present time it is the paramount duty of all southern interests to work together for the prime purpose of advancing the price of spot cotton as quickly as possible to ten cents. The whole cotton trade knows that present prices are too low. The spinners and manufacturers are generally out-spoken in their objection to such low prices as are prevailing at the present. Letters which are reaching us from the manufacturing centers of Europe clearly indicate that the spinning trade abroad anticipated the payment of much higher prices for this crop than the present market authorizes.

The Southern Cotton Association, Farmer's Union, bankers, merchants, and all business interests in the south should stand shoulder to shoulder for at least ten cents at the present time. A determined persistent stand all along the line will win success. Let everybody help and pull together. The present price of spot cotton is contracting the currency of the south and if not advanced will mean millions of dollars loss in the aggregate. The cotton Journal hopes and believes that both of the prices fixed on cotton by the two organizations named will be fully realized by those who do not rush their staple to market too fast.—Cotton Journal.

JUST one more week of activity and suspense then we'll know who'll be the delegate from old 87.

"If you see a man who has a move on him step aside and don't be an obstacle in his way," observes the Pontotoc Review. Probably this is the way the lively candidate feels about it.

The advocates of joint statehood in Arizona have held a little convention, nominated a candidate for delegate and plan to make a plucky fight. But it is generally conceded to be a hopeless undertaking; that territory is overwhelmingly against the union with New Mexico.

Financing Great Cotton Corporation.

Montgomery, Ala. Sept. 26—A meeting of the cotton growers of the state was held here yesterday at which President Harvie Jordan of the Southern cotton association was the principal speaker.

Addresses were also delivered by Field Agent Smith and Executive Committeeman Witherspoon of Mississippi. The chief object of the meeting was to discuss the recent resolution of the executive committee at its Hot Springs convention fixing the minimum price of cotton at 10 cents.

The necessity for a strict conformity to this resolution was urged by the speakers. It is believed that most of the growers are now in a position to hold their crops until the demands of the mills will necessitate an advance to the minimum price agreed upon.

Another important matter which came up for discussion was that of the financing of the proposed $100,000,000 corporation to handle the crops of distressed growers who are financially unable to hold their cotton. This class has always been the main obstacle to maintaining the price set by the association and it is proposed to establish warehouses where the cotton can be stored until the price advances. By this method the cotton forced upon the market can be prevented from falling into the hands of the spinners and exporters.

Meetings similar to the one held here will be held in all of the cotton states and will be conducted by President Jordan and his assistants. The itinerary is as follows:

Shreveport, La., Sept. 27; Palestine, Texas, Sept. 28; Taylor, Texas, Sept. 29; Waco, Texas, Oct. 1; Dallas, Texas, Oct. 2; Sherman, Texas, Oct. 3; Oklahoma City, Oct. 4; Fort Smith Ark., Oct. 5; Pine Bluff, Ark., Oct. 6; Orangeburg, S. C. Oct. 8; Raleigh, N. C. Oct. 9.

Street and Pattern Hats Displayed.

At the store of W. C. Rollow Tuesday Mrs. L. T. Wilson had on display an exquisite display of street and pattern hats. Notice of the opening had been given and crowds viewed the gorgeous showing all day.

Among the noticeable articles of headwear for ladies shown by Mrs. Wilson were the Guages in browns, the Gaimesboros, the Queens, the Mme. Heitz Boyers, fancy sailors and Sanremos. They were shown in various shades and coloring.

The display was an excellent one and showed that Mrs. Wilson exhibited exceedingly good taste in her buying.

Short Session Over.

Judge Dickerson, Tuesday, completed the two days session of U. S. Court given the attorneys for settlement of pleadings preliminary to the term of court beginning next Monday. Little business of interest to the public was transacted. L. C. Andrews, having removed from Ada, resigned from the Examining Board of the Bar. The court appointed as his successor Duke Stone. The other members are J. F. McKeel and W. C. Curry.

Millinery Opening.

Tuesday morning shone forth in splendor and everything bid fair to the Millinery openings. Mrs. Alexander and her assistants did their work well in beautifying their Millinery store.

The decorations of potted plants and cut flowers were beautiful; while strains from the graphophone could be heard. The window display consisted of large Gainsboro dress hats in black and gray which are so stylish this season.

To the left as we entered the store was quite an attractive counter of hats in the new red shades consisting of misses, childrens and ladies shapes, the center hat of Red Glengary was very attractive.

Crowds visited the store until a late hour and many were the words of praise uttered regarding the beautiful showing.

JOHN HENRY

ON THE GRIP.

By HUGH McHUGH
[GEORGE V. HOBART]

"I'm Glad the Japs Put the Boots to the Czar."

Say, did you ever spar a few hot rounds with a real attack of grip?

When it comes right down to a case of being a bad boy the grip has every other disease slapped to a sit-down.

I had the grip some weeks ago and ever since my system has felt like eight cents' worth of cheese.

The medicine sharps tell us that the grip is caused by a little germ which emigrated to this country originally from Russia.

If that's the case I'm glad the Japs put the boots to the czar. I wish they would go after him again and kick his crown off.

"I'll bet even money that the father of the first grip germ must have been a bombshell and his mother was some relation to one of Kuropatkin's retreats.

Its dollars to pretzels that the grip germ is the busiest idea that was ever chased by a doctor.

Nobody knows just how or when the grip germs break into the system, but once they get a foothold in the epiglottis nothing can remove them except inward applications of dynamite.

The grip germ hates the idea of race suicide.

From one small germ there will arise and go forth a family the size of which was never dreamed of in the philosophy of our wise and busy president.

I don't know just exactly how they happened to warm wise to me, but a newly married couple of grip germs took a notion to build a nest somewhere on the outskirts of my solar plexus, and two hours later they had about 233 children attending the public school in my nuda oblongata; and every time school would let out for recess I would go up in the air and hit the ceiling with my topknot.

Before the next morning came all these grip children had graduated from school and after tearing down the schoolhouse the whole bunch had married and had large families of their own, and all hands were out paddling their canoes on my alimentary canal.

By nine o'clock that morning there must have been $5,000,000 grip germs armed with self-loading revolvers all trying to shoot their initials over the walls of my interior department.

It was fierce!

When the doctor arrived on the scene I was carrying enough concealed weapons to exterminate the entire Japanese army.

I'm up to one thing and that is that the Russians couldn't beat the Japs because all the national energy and vitality emigrated from St. Petersburg and came over here with the first grip germs.

If the czar of all the Russians had been a wise little father he would have encouraged the grip germs to remain loyal to their native land and then he could have sent them out to Manchuria to bite the ramparts out of Gen. Oyama instead of chasing inoffensive American citizens into the drug stores.

Well, anyway, the medicine mixer blew in, threw his saws behind the sofa, put his dip net on the mantelpiece and took a fall out of my pulse.

"Ah!" he said, after he had noted that my tongue looked like a curycumb.

"The same to you, doc," I said.

"Ah!" he said, looking hard at the wall.

"Say, doc!" I whispered; "there's no use to cut off my leg because the germs will hide in my elbow."

"Do you feel shooting pains in the

"She Put Up a Howl."

cerebellum near the apex of the cosmopolitan?" inquired the doctor.

"Surest thing you know," I said.

"Have you a buzzing in the ears, and a confused sound like distant laughter in the panatella?" he asked.

"It's a cinch, doc," I said.

"Do you feel a roaring in the cornucopia with a tickling sensation in the diaphragm?" he asked.

"Right again," I whispered.

"Do the joints feel sore and pinched like a poolroom?" he said.

"Right!"

"Does your tongue feel rare and high-priced like a porterhouse steak at a summer resort?"

"It do!"

"Do you feel a spasmodic fluttering in the concertina?"

"Yes!"

"Have you a sort of nervous hesitation in your hunger and does everything you eat taste like an impossible sandwich?"

"Keno!"

"Does your nerve center tinkle-tinkle like a breakfast bell?"

"Right again!"

"Have you a feeling that the germs

"When the Doctor Arrived."

have attacked your Adam's apple and that there won't be any core?"

"Yes."

"When you look at the wall paper does your brain do a sort of loop-the-loop and cause you to meld 100 acres or double pinochie?"

"Yes, and 80 kings, too!"

"Do you feel a slight palpitation of the membrane of the Colorado madura and is there a confused murmur in your brain like the sound of a hard-working gas meter?"

"You've got me sized good and plenty, doc!"

"Do you have insomnia, nightmare, loss of appetite, chills and fever and concealed respiration in the carolina perfecto?"

"That's the idea, doc."

"When you lie on your right side do you have an impulse to turn over on your left side, and when you turn over on your left side do you feel an impulse to jump out of bed and throw stones at a policeman?"

"There isn't anything you can mention, doc, that I haven't got!"

"Ah!" said the doctor; "then that settles it."

"Tell me the truth, doctor!" I groaned; "what is it, bubonic plague?"

"You have something worse—you have the grip," he whispered, gently. "You see I tried hard to mention some symptom which you didn't have, but you had them all, and the grip is the only disease in the world which makes a specialty of having every symptom known to medical jurisprudence."

Then the doctor got busy with the pencil gag and left me enough prescriptions to keep the druggist in pocket money throughout the summer.

Later my wife came in and asked me how I felt, and when I began to discourse amiably about undertakers she put up a howl that brought the rest of the family around the bedside on a hurry call.

When I told them I had the grip each and every member of the household from Uncle Peter down to the cook began to suggest remedies, and if I had taken half they suggested they could have sold me to a junk dealer and got good money.

That evening our next-door neighbor, Bud Taylor, came in and advised me to take quinine and whisky every time I felt a shooting pain.

I took his advice, but at the end of the first hour the score was 98 to 37 in favor of the shooting pains, and the whisky had such an effect on the quinine that it made the germs jealous, so between them they cooked up a little black man who advised me to chase Bud out of the house, which I did by throwing medicine bottles at him.

That night the whisky and quinine held a director's meeting with the germs and then they wound up with a sort of Mardi Gras parade through my system.

I was the goat!

When daylight broke I was a total wreck, and I swore that the next person that said whisky and quinine to me would get all his.

After breakfast another friend of ours, Jack Gibson, blew in, and after he looked me over his weary eye fell on the decanter.

Then Jack smacked his lips and whispered that the best cure for the grip was a glass of whisky and quinine every time I felt chills and fever, and he'd be glad to join me.

When loving hands picked Jack up at the bottom of the stairs he was almost insulted, but he quieted down when my wife explained to him that I was suffering not only from the grip but that I had also a slight attack of jlu-jitsu.

After weeks of study devoted to the subject I have come to the conclusion that the only way to cure the grip is to stay stick until you get better.

That's what I did!

WORST CLASS OF BURGLARS

Educated Professionals Are the Smoothest and Give the Police Most Trouble.

The chief constable of Liverpool is of the opinion that education is refining the latter-day criminals, and a prominent criminologist indorses this view.

Says the chief constable in his annual report: "The burglar avoids violence whenever possible, and chooses when occasion offers more subtle forms of roguery. Bill Sykes is to be dreaded less than Kaffies, and the latter is to be found less than the accomplished scoundrel who lays far-reaching plans to swindle a whole community."

Men who 50 years ago would have been burglars or highwaymen are today bogus company promoters and well-dressed swindlers of various kinds. Their profits are enhanced and their risks diminished, and I have no doubt that this is one of the fruits of modern education.

For education, like all other things, has its dark side. An inevitable result of a little learning is to develop hypocrisy where the moral training is not commensurate with the merely intellectual culture.

"The child of to-day, whose ethical teaching is neglected and who has inherited criminal instincts, is launched on society with a better equipment for a career of crime. His education has made him sharper and fuller of devices, it gives intelligence to his fraudulent instincts and widens his radius of practice."

Criminals of this kind are the most dangerous to society because they are the most insidious.

As the twig is bent so the tree inclines. Insist on the moral and religious training of children as well as upon the purely intellectual training of children."

PRINCIPAL NEWS BUREAU.

Cobbler-Barber Who Was the Chief Medium of Information in General.

A talkative and self-important young court stenographer went with a detailed judge to one of the feud towns in the Kentucky mountains to do his part in holding a term of court.

It was a small place, relates the Saturday Evening Post, far from a railroad, and the inhabitants were all feudists of one clan or another. After a day or two at the little hotel the stenographer said to the hotel keeper: "Where's the barber shop?"

"Ain't no barber shop here," the boniface replied. "We all mostly lets our hair grow."

"But can't I get shaved anywhere?" "Oh, yes, I reckon you kin. Uncle Joe down to the cobbler's shop sometimes shaves folks."

The stenographer went to Uncle Joe's and found the cobbler to be a mild-mannered old man, with flowing gray whiskers and a pale and beatific blue eye.

Uncle Joe said he could shave him and he got out a razor and a shaving mug. The stenographer sat down on a chair and leaned back. He waited in some trepidation, but the old man was skillful and gave him a good shave.

It was necessary for the young man to talk, so when the barber was on his throat he said: "Good many murders around here, ain't there?"

"Well, suh," the barber said, "we don't call them murders. Howsomer, there is some killin's, if that is what you mean."

"Oh, well," said the young man, "I suppose one name's as good as another. When was the last killing?"

"A man was shot out here in the square last week."

"Who shot him?"

The barber brought the razor up on the young man's Adam's apple. "I did," he said.

"NOT SO DARNED FUNNY." "Uncle Dave" Thought He Had Listened to Mark Twain, But He Hadn't.

Col. Armory Knox, of Texas Siftings and border ranger fame, was the first manager of the daily newspaper that ex-Gov. Douglas established at Brocton. Just before the paper was launched Mr. Douglas introduced the colonel to the Democrats of Brocton at a banquet. Col. Knox made a little speech, in which he said that he would furnish the brains for the paper, while Mr. Douglas would furnish the money. Then he told a very good story, thus:

Old Uncle Davis went from a little village to Boston to hear Mark Twain lecture at Music hall. By mistake he got into Tremont temple and heard a discourse by Rev. Joseph Cook.

When he got home and was seated in the grocery store among his crows, one of them asked: "Well, Uncle Dave, was that there Mark Twain funny?"

"Why, yes," drawled the old man, "he were funny, but," musingly, "he weren't so darned funny."

PROTEST ON BEHALF OF BOYS

Writer Cries Out at Martyrdom Suggested by Writer.

For the sake of the future of the race it may be hoped that the modern mother does not take half, nor quarter, of the modern advice placed at her disposal. Here is an authority on the rearing of the young, volunteering this recipe in a Philadelphia periodical:

"To arrest the darkening of a boy's light hair, put a half ounce of salts of tartar in the first wash water when washing, and let the child sit in the sun a good deal."

By all means let him sit in the sun. A healthy boy enjoys the sun, and if he is given to understand that he is sitting in it in order to bleach his hair the idea will fill him with rapture and he will remain motionless for hours at a stretch.

If there is anything that a boy should have for his own it is his hair—that and the freckles and scratches and blisters and stone bruises which he accumulates. His time he can't have to himself, at least he couldn't in the old days, because he had to run errands and do certain fixed stunts, called "stints" or chores. But he ought to have a clear title to his hair, surely.

If he is compelled to devote most or even a few of his waking hours to processes whereby he may wear flaxen hair that will curl prettily, he may become a thoughtful, attentive and "perfectly lovely" young man, who can pass things at an afternoon reception without spilling them; but heaven help him!

The only thing a normal, energetic boy asks to have done with his hair is to have it let alone when it isn't being clipped close to his scalp. And the talk about the first wash water! It might be supposed that the boy was being put through three washings and was to be rinsed, rough dried and hung on a line. It's a watchful mother who gets a boy with legs under him to the second wash water.—Providence Tribune.

INVISIBLE LAND OF OLD AGE

Country Which Is all About the People of the Earth.

The Land of Old Age is an invisible country which is all about us. However young you are, you have been near it, and I should count you unfortunate indeed if, in the heat of the day, you had not turned into its shady by-paths and lingered a moment with its quiet dwellers. It is a very peaceful land; there is not much work there to be done; duty is rarely seen—so seldom, in fact, that sometimes those of us who have gone there to live for good feel that we have passed our time of usefulness and have moments of hot resentment that we are not out in the world doing its work for it. I feel that way myself often, and at such times make excursions outside. Always the gentle hands of my children lead me back to my own country; and I sometimes feel that the reason we resist taking up our places there is this sense that we are not allowed to come out when we wish, that we are kept prisoners—not through our own weaknesses, but because there are certain conventions as to what is suitable or unsuitable for us old people.—Harper's Bazaar.

Her Secret Out.

Robert Watchorn, the commissioner of immigration, has made a sympathetic and thorough study of the immigrant types that reach New York. Discussing these types the other day, he said: "The most naive are the Germans from the smaller and remoter states. They have the charmingly simple and quaint minds of children. A beautiful German girl disembarked here the other day. She was tall and strong, blue-eyed and yellow-haired. She wanted to know at once if there were any letters for her. The postmaster at the pier, after getting her name, said, by way of a joke: 'Is it a business or a love letter that you expect?' The girl faltered: 'A business letter.'"

"Well, there's nothing here," said the man after looking over the assortment.

"The girl hesitated. Then, blushing as red as a rose, she said: 'Would you mind just looking among the love letters now, sir?'"

He Owed It to Himself.

"Do you think I look well in this dress?" she asked.

"Um," her husband replied, "who made it?"

"I did, but I'm afraid—"

"My dear, I never saw you have on a more becoming gown than that one is. By Jove, you look so slim, and graceful and young that I can hardly realize we've been married seven years."

"O, Alfred, do you really mean that? I believe I'll make all my clothes after this."

As soon as he could decently get away, Alfred went out and treated himself to several of the best cigars he could find.

Mr. Masterson Answered.

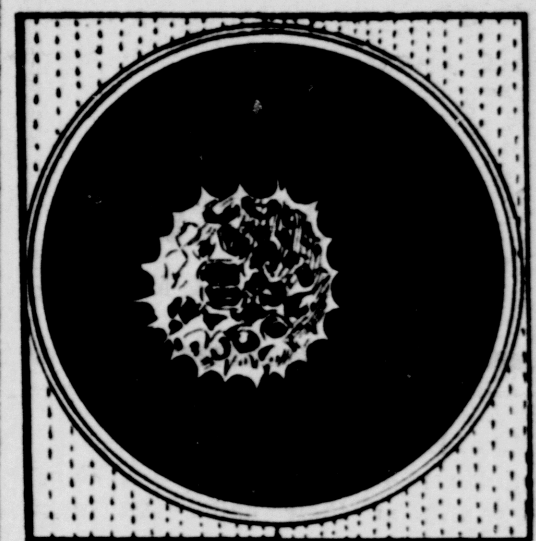

Rev. Mr. Masterson, a summer resident of Marblehead Neck, for reasons best known to himself, wears in the hottest weather a long coat and a handkerchief around his neck. Thus dressed he frequently takes long runs about town, but has decided objections to being stared at. One day, recently he was running along, and, noticing a small boy gazing at him, he stopped and asked querulously: "What are you looking at?" The boy promptly replied: "I'm looking at a fool."

A Summer Study in the Marvels of Insects' Eggs

Wonderful World Into Which the Microscope Leads the Patient Investigator.

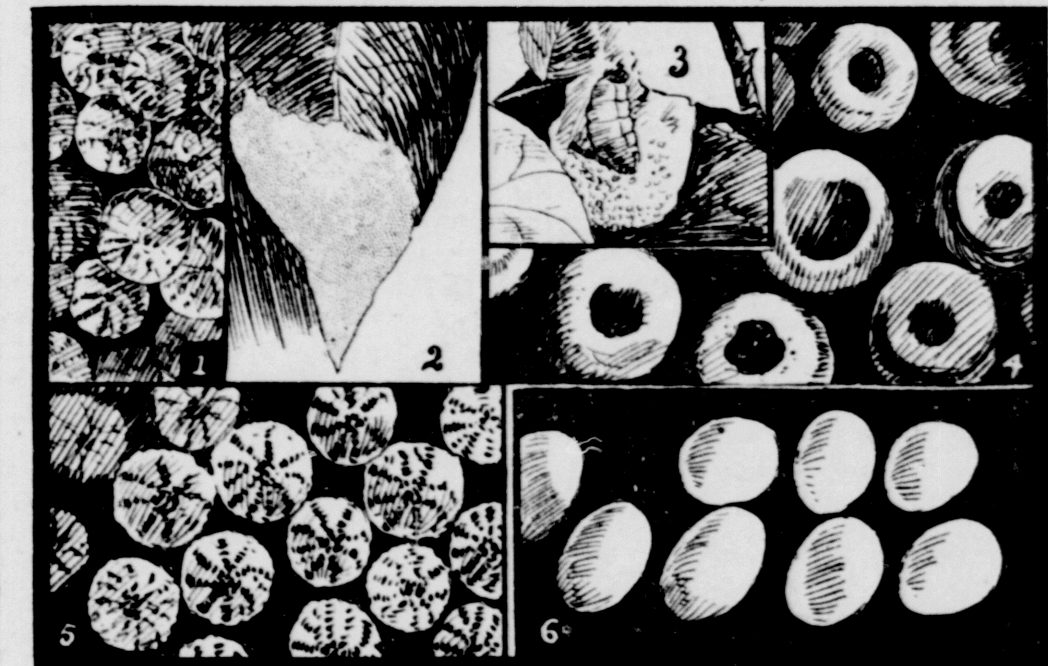

What wonders nature holds in store for the observer in the summer time. There is the world that unfolds to the naked eye and beyond it lies another world of infinitesimal beings which can only be studied and appreciated through the aid of the microscope. And with one which will magnify about 25 diameters, one can discover unexpected and novel features, and innumerable details which the unaided sight would be unable to see.

In the outdoor world, the most startling discoveries can be made, and every insect, leaf, and flower will have wonders of its own to reveal.

The pretty Egg of the White Admiral Butterfly.

Since then, minute things, all more or less marvelous, would be so abundant, we must direct our newly-endowed power of vision in some particular direction; otherwise we might be bewildered by the many novel appearances around us. Let us, for the moment, therefore, give attention to the numerous insects which move and fly so gaily amongst flowers and leaves. Let us remember, too, that before we could have this busy throng of little animals, for each one a tiny egg had to be carefully deposited in some suitable spot by the mother insect; and let us bear in mind, also, that every mother insect we now see is seeking for some fitting site in which to place her all-important ova, so that her offspring may thrive. Of course these eggs are very minute, but, with the microscope adding so greatly to our powers of sight, we are able to see these tiny objects. Where? you ask. I answer: On the leaves and stems of almost every plant that grows; for it is, indeed, a favored plant that is not the prey of one or more insects in their larval or caterpillar stage.

It is important for the reader to bear in mind the actual size of these eggs relative to other objects, and that the photographs which illustrate this article represent them very much larger than their natural size,—as we should see them with the suggested increase in our power of vision; that is, they are shown in the pictures at least 25 diameters larger than their natural size.

When we have seen one egg of a butterfly we have by no means exhausted the novelty of the subject, for the next one we meet with, of another species, will prove just as entertaining an object. In fact, each species of butterfly and moth has its own characteristic form of egg, so that it is possible for one acquainted with the various shapes and designs to name the insect that each egg will eventually produce.

In one illustration we show the egg of the handsome White Admiral butterfly. Here the shell is decorated with deep hexagonal cells, which have spikes or prickles placed on their angles. These eggs are usually placed on the honeysuckle or woodbine, generally close to edge, or near the apex, of the leaves.

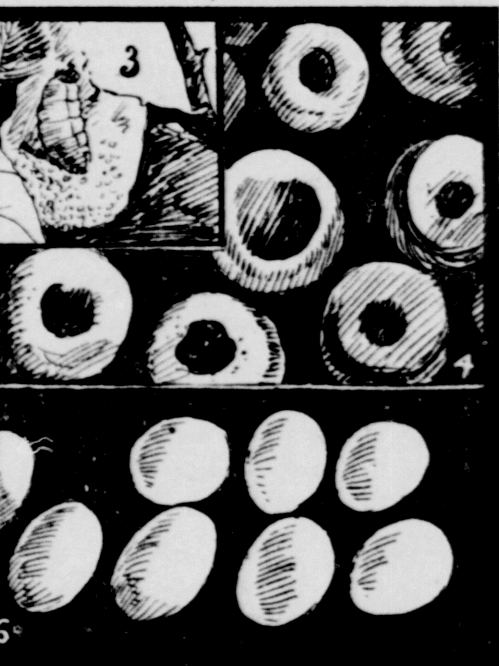

The Silver-washed Fritillary, one of the largest and most beautiful of British butterflies, also deposits an interesting form of egg and this is most frequently laid on the leaves of the sweet violet, or the unscented dog violet.

We might consider the eggs of many other butterflies and find them equally attractive, but, as we must glance at the ova of other insects, we will turn now to moths; and here, on the leaf of this elder tree, is a good example. But, first, I want you to look at this leaf with the normal sight. (Number 2 in the large illustration). You will notice that, on its under side, from the apex, and some distance down, the leaf is coated with a flat layer of some finely granulated substance. Then apply your microscopic eye, with its power of enlarging what you see by 25 diameters, and in the picture to the left we have depicted a portion of what you have just seen with the normal eye. That finely-granulated layer, we now see, consists of about 1,300 eggs of the common large Yellow Underwing moth, all regularly placed, side by side, and fitted, even, to the irregularly cut edge of the leaf; and all, undoubtedly, laid by one insect. Moreover, almost every egg in this large batch proved to be fertile and produced a living caterpillar. Such is the extent of the progeny of the Underwing moth.

On the same elder branch, and on almost the next leaf, is another batch of about 200 eggs, of a larger size, but similar in form, though of more intricate design; some of which I have shown in illustration No. 1.

The very common Vaporer moth deposits some similar eggs, the shells of which are not thin and iridescent, like the previous examples we have glanced at, but thicker and opaque, and remind one of a porcelain pot with a lid bearing an indentation in its center (No. 4). The female insect of this species of moth is curious from the fact that she has no wings to fly with, and on that account looks like a fat grub, her large dimensions being due to the several hundred eggs she carries. When the caterpillar is about to become a chrysalis, it weaves first a silken web to cover it; and the female moth, in due course, crawls from her chrysalis on to the web, and remains there. Then, in some mysterious manner, her winged mate, while pursuing his flight, is attracted to wards her. She never moves from her place on the outside of the web that covers the cocoon, but deposits her batch of eggs about it, and then she dies amongst them. In the upper part of the illustration the female moth will be seen depositing her eggs—both moth and eggs being here shown of natural size. The eggs are laid about August, or later in the year, and remain as eggs throughout the winter and spring, hatching their larvae about the following June; differing in this way from all the previous examples shown, which produce their larvae in from a week to a fortnight after being laid.

Some of the silvery reticulated eggs of the common Currant or Gooseberry moth, whose larvae do so much damage to the trees from which it derives its popular name, are shown in No. 6.

A careful search at any time during the summer and autumn months should reveal most of these and many other equally interesting examples in season at the time.

AMERICAN INTERVENTION SEEMS TO BE INEVITABLE

Havana, Sept. 26.—All the members of the cabinet and the heads of departments have presented their resignations to President Palma. He has accepted them, but the officers will retain their positions until the resignation of the president has been presented to congress.

It is declared on very high authority that American intervention in Cuba is certain. Furthermore, it is expected that the proclamation of intervention will be issued from Oyster Bay.

The Cuban republic stands on the verge of a second period of American intervention. The moderate party which six weeks ago was in absolute control of every office in the national provincial and municipal, determined to abdicate everything and compel the United States to intervene.

In fact every government official from President Palma down is sincerely anxious to force such intervention rather than yield to any one of the terms offered by the liberal party those in arms against the government.

The liberal leaders characterize the conduct of the government as treason to the republic, while secretary of Taft regards it as an unwarranted dishonorable attempt to force the hand of the United States into intervention. This, it has been stated, is precisely ing of unrest and there appears nothing whatever to promise relief save full control by the United States.

LOGICAL PLATFORM FOR A REPUBLICAN NOMINEE

Oklahoma City, Sept. 26.—Henry Asp is telling the people of Guthrie that he wrote the platform that was adopted by the convention that nominated him for delegate to the constitutional convention. In view of the services Asp rendered his company in defeating all bills in the legislature of Oklahoma that was introduced for the purpose of relieving the people of the rate robbery that has been carried on for years, it would appear that the following revision will appeal to the people:

We, Henry E. Asp and the Sante Fe railway convention assembled do hereby declare that we favor a railroad and ware house commission to be elected by the people with full power to prevent us from looting the people by charging exorbitant rates. Of course we have always opposed such laws heretofore, and Mr. Asp has been able to prevent them passing the legislature of Oklahoma, but if you will let us write the constitution we will provide for those things.

We favor a law that will prevent us from discriminating or giving rebates to our special favorites in business. We have not been in favor of this before, but as something is going to be done, we want you to let us do it, and we promise anything along these lines.

We are in favor of railroads being compelled to charge the same freight and fare to every citizen and community. Of course we are not doing it now. It is true we are charging 28 cent rate on wheat from Guthrie to Galveston while at the same time we are only charging Kansas City 12 cents to the same point. We have been asked by the farmers to reduce the rate, but there being no law to compel us, we cannot do it.

We favor a provision to prevent us from owning, either directly or indirectly, coal lands, or to operate coal lands in the state. We have our own coal mines in Colorado, and if we can fix it so the other roads cannot buy up the coal lands in this state, we can still have a cinch on making people buy our coal on our lines where there is no competition.

We favor an employer's liability law which will be just both to capital and labor. It is true that Mr. Asp defeated the fellow servant law introduced in the last legislature by Mr. Noffsinger, but we will have to do something along that line, and we would rather do it ourselves than to have some one else do it for us. There are many other things we will have to do, and we promise anything you ask for if you will only send us to the constitutional convention. The Democrats are advocating the initiative and referendum, and we are willing to promise anything to keep that out of the constitution. We are afraid Henry will lose out entirely if that measure goes into the constitution, and we will be at the mercy of the people.

P. S. We are in favor of an organic law that will leave in the people themselves full power and freedom to control the state in the interest of all the people all the time. We came very nearly forgetting that.

ARMED NEGROES ARRESTED AND PEACE IS RESTORED

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 26.—The known dead, who have met death in connection with the riots here since last Saturday night, number one white man and eighteen negroes.

The main events during yesterday were the ordering into the city of four companies of state militia from outside points, Gov. Terrell saying that the order was given as a matter of precaution rather than from any pressing necessity. The gathering of a large representation of business and professional men at noon called for vigorous action by the city executive regarding negro dives and saloons. Resolutions demanded that these places be closed and kept closed perpetually.

In these demands the leading members of the negro clergy united, promising their support of all measures for the common good and their influence with their own people.

One negro was killed at Brownville by the militia in the morning while trying to break through the lines. Two hundred and fifty-seven negroes have already been placed under arrest in Brownville. The majority of them were heavily armed. One other negro tried to get away and was shot.

The raid started shortly after 5 o'clock. The negroes were searched for arms and every one found to be armed.

Following the arrest of 257 negroes at Brownville, which includes Clark University, early in the day and the detention of about 100 of these in the county jail, the feeling prevailed that at last peace had been restored by a strong show of authority.

A Fast Afternoon.

Tuesday afternoon Broadway was a fast track despite the rough spots. First, Joe Harrington gave a thrilling exhibition of horsemanship riding a fiery, untamed, young bay. The beast did some terrific bucking and plunging, but Joe stayed on. Once he lost the reins, and onlookers cringed as the horse plunged wildly down the street. However Joe dexterously recovered the reins and took control once more. It was a genuine performance, one superior to the average wild west performance; but on the streets such exhilarating sport is a bit dangerous to life, limb and property.

Later Ingram's milk wagon team got tired of waiting at Chapman's hotel and terrorized the business section by taking a whirlwind spin down Broadway to the Frisco. The wagon's contents were dumped early in the run and other vehicles in the path narrowly escaped disastrous collision. After making a circuit of several blocks the team was caught on Main and no serious damage was reported. It is said the milk man is offering some bargains in milk shakes.

Drivers might do well to try hitching the traces or hitching the horses.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

PREPOSTEROUS.

Desperate indeed is getting the attitude of the Republican party in the new state. Republicans observe the honest men of all classes and sections—those who sincerely desire a government which will protect the people—flocking to the Democratic standard; they see the Democratic headquarters doing a noble and effective work enlightening the people on the issues of the campaign and courageously exposing Republican corruption; then observing the corresponding decline and disintegration of the G. O. P. leaders, filled with envy and chagrin, get frenzied in their impetuosity.

In a desperate effort to counteract the repeated exposure of the G. O. P.'s intimacy with the corporate interests they are now declaring the heavy expenses of maintaining our Democratic Headquarters and various speakers in the field are paid by the Standard Oil Company, that Standard oil is in league with the Democratic leaders to seize control of the new state. How palpably false, how ridiculous! And such an accusation to be found in the columns of the Oklahoma State Capital, the organ of the Santa Fe Railroad! Children now know that the interests of Standard oil and of the railroad trust are one. Does it stand to reason that they would fight each other in politics? The Republican party, both in the Territories and in the nation at large, has long been monopoly's trusted pal in perfidy. It is ridiculously illogical that there should come any rupture of relations at this time.

As to the source of the Democratic campaign fund, it has been made plain that it is made up of the voluntary contributions of the honest, toiling masses. Democratic speakers are holding meetings throughout the two territories and having contributions taken to pay the legitimate expense of conducting our great crusade for righteous government. Strict account of contributions are kept at Oklahoma City, where at any time the skeptical and suspicious may inspect to his satisfaction. Those who wish are contributing to this fund are expecting no return, no special privileges or immunities. All they want is a fair and equal chance, and this with reason they expect if they succeed in placing the Democratic party in power.

THE SORT OF MAN WANTED.

The Times takes pleasure in publishing in another column an interesting extract from a speech recently delivered in Ada. It is of interest to voters in the 87th district. The speech was made by Carlton Weaver, candidate for the Democratic nomination for delegate.

Editorially the Ada Democrat had urged that a candidate should be selected who would look after the "material interests of Ada." Replying thereto before an audience of his home town, Weaver boldly declared that he placed the interest of the whole district far above the local ambitions of the town of Ada.

Such an utterance, under the circumstances, required sublime courage. It is such courage as must excite the admiration of every patriotic Democrat. That's the sort of man we want, one broad enough in his sympathies to put first and foremost the vital interests of all the people. That's the sort of man the people will nominate next Tuesday.—Mill Creek Times.

ALL SHOULD WORK TOGETHER

At the present time it is the paramount duty of all southern interests to work together for the prime purpose of advancing the price of spot cotton as quickly as possible to ten cents. The whole cotton trade knows that present prices are too low. The spinners and manufacturers are generally out-spoken in their objection to such low prices as are prevailing at the present. Letters which are reaching us from the manufacturing centers of Europe clearly indicate that the spinning trade abroad anticipated the payment of much higher prices for this crop than the present market authorizes.

The Southern Cotton Association, Farmer's Union, bankers, merchants, and all business interests in the south should stand shoulder to shoulder for at least ten cents at the present time. A determined persistent stand all along the line will win success. Let everybody help and pull together. The present price of spot cotton is contracting the currency of the south and if not advanced will mean millions of dollars loss in the aggregate. The cotton Journal hopes and believes that both of the prices fixed on cotton by the two organizations named will be fully realized by those who do not rush their staple to market too fast.—Cotton Journal.

JUST one more week of activity and suspense then we'll know who'll be the delegate from old 87.

"If you see a man who has a move on him step aside and don't be an obstacle in his way," observes the Pontotoc Review. Probably this is the way the lively candidate feels about it.

The advocates of joint statehood in Arizona have held a little convention, nominated a candidate for delegate and plan to make a plucky fight. But it is generally conceded to be a hopeless undertaking; that territory is overwhelmingly against the union with New Mexico.

Financing Great Cotton Corporation.

Montgomery, Ala. Sept. 26—A meeting of the cotton growers of the state was held here yesterday at which President Harvie Jordan of the Southern cotton association was the principal speaker.

Addresses were also delivered by Field Agent Smith and Executive Committeeman Witherspoon of Mississippi. The chief object of the meeting was to discuss the recent resolution of the executive committee at its Hot Springs convention fixing the minimum price of cotton at 10 cents.

The necessity for a strict conformity to this resolution was urged by the speakers. It is believed that most of the growers are now in a position to hold their crops until the demands of the mills will necessitate an advance to the minimum price agreed upon.

Another important matter which came up for discussion was that of the financing of the proposed $100,000,000 corporation to handle the crops of distressed growers who are financially unable to hold their cotton. This class has always been the main obstacle to maintaining the price set by the association and it is proposed to establish warehouses where the cotton can be stored until the price advances. By this method the cotton forced upon the market can be prevented from falling into the hands of the spinners and exporters.

Meetings similar to the one held here will be held in all of the cotton states and will be conducted by President Jordan and his assistants. The itinerary is as follows:

Shreveport, La., Sept. 27; Palestine, Texas, Sept. 28; Taylor, Texas, Sept. 29; Waco, Texas, Oct. 1; Dallas, Texas, Oct. 2; Sherman, Texas, Oct. 3; Oklahoma City, Oct. 4; Fort Smith, Ark., Oct. 5; Pine Bluff, Ark., Oct. 6; Orangeburg, S. C. Oct. 8; Raleigh, N. C. Oct. 9.

Judge Dickerson, Tuesday, completed the two days session of U. S. Court given the attorneys for settlement of pleadings preliminary to the term of court beginning next Monday. Little business of interest to the public was transacted. L. C. Andrews, having removed from Ada, resigned from the Examining Board of the Bar. The court appointed as his successor Duke Stone. Millinery Opening.

Tuesday morning shone forth in splendor and everything bid fair to the Millinery openings. Mrs. Alexander and her assistants did their work well in beautifying their Millinery store.

The decorations of potted plants and cut flowers were beautiful; while strains from the graphophone could be heard. The window display consisted of large Gainesboro dress hats in black and gray which are so stylish this season.

To the left as we entered the store was quite an attractive counter of hats in the new red shades consisting of misses, childrens and ladies shapes, the center hat of Red Glengary was very attractive.

Crowds visited the store until a late hour and many were the words of praise uttered regarding the beautiful showing.

JOHN HENRY

ON THE GRIP.

By HUGH McHUGH
(GEORGE Y. HOBART)

"I'm Glad the Japs Put the Boots to the Czar."

Say, did you ever spar a few hot rounds with a real attack of grip?

When it comes right down to a case of being a bad boy the grip has every other disease slapped to a sit-down. I had the grip some weeks ago and ever since my system has felt like eight cents' worth of cheese.

The medicine sharps tell us that the grip is caused by a little germ which emigrated to this country originally from Russia.

If that's the case I'm glad the Japs put the boots to the czar. I wish they would go after him again and kick his crown off.

I'll bet even money that the father of the first grip germ must have been a bombshell and his mother was some relation to one of Kuropatkin's retreats. Its dollars to pretzels that the grip germ is the busiest idea that was ever chased by a doctor.

Nobody knows just how or when the grip germs break into the system, but once they get a foothold in the epiglottis nothing can remove them except inward applications of dynamite.

The grip germ hates the idea of race suicide.

From one small germ there will arise and go forth a family the size of which was never dreamed of in the philosophy of our wise and busy president.

I don't know just exactly how they happened to warm wise to me but a newly married couple of grip germs took a notion to build a nest somewhere on the outskirts of my solar plexus, and two hours later they had about 233 children attending the public school in my medusa oblongata, and every time school would let out for recess I would go up in the air and hit the ceiling with my topknot.

Before the next morning came all these grip children had graduated from school and after tearing down the schoolhouse the whole bunch had married and had large families of their own, and all hands were out paddling their canoes on my alimentary canal.

By nine o'clock that morning there must have been 35,000,000 grip germs armed with self-loading revolvers all trying to shoot their initials over the walls of my interior department.

It was fierce!

When the doctor arrived on the scene I was carrying enough concealed weapons to exterminate the entire Japanese army.

I'm up to one thing and that is that the Russians couldn't beat the Japs because all the national energy and vitality emigrated from St. Petersburg and came over here with the first grip germs. If the czar of all the Russians had been a wise little father he would have encouraged the grip germs to remain loyal to their native land and then he could have sent them out to Manchuria to bite the ramparts out of Gen. Oyama. Instead of chasing inoffensive American citizens into the drug stores.

Well, anyway, the medicine mixer blew in, threw his saws behind the sofa, put his dip net on the mantelpiece and took a fall out of my pulse.

"Ah!" he said, after he had noted that my tongue looked like a currycomb.

"The same to you, doc," I said.

"Ah!" he said, looking hard at the wall.

"Say, doc!" I whispered, "there's no use to cut off my leg because the germs will hide in my elbow."

"Do you feel shooting pains in the cerebellum near the apex of the cosmopolitan?" inquired the doctor.

"Surest thing you know," I said.

"Have you a buzzing in the ears, and a confused sound like distant laughter in the panatella?" he asked.

"It's a clench, doc," I said.

"Do you feel a roaring in the cornucopia with a tickling sensation in the diaphragm?" he asked.

"Right again," I whispered.

"Do the joints feel sore and pinched like a poolroom?" he said.

"Right!"

"Does your tongue feel rare and high-priced like a porterhouse steak at a summer resort?"

"It do!"

"Do you feel a spasmodic fluttering in the concertina?"

"Yes!"

"Have you a sort of nervous hesitation in your hunger and does everything you eat taste like an impossible sandwich?"

"Keno!"

"Does your nerve center tinkle-tinkle like a breakfast bell?"

"Right again!"

"Have you a feeling that the germs

"When the Doctor Arrived."

have attacked your Adam's apple and that there won't be any core?"

"Yes."

"When you look at the wall paper does your brain do a sort of loop-the-loop and cause you to melt 100 acres of double pinocchio?"

"Yes, and 80 kings too!"

"Do you feel a slight palpitation of the membrane of the Colorado madras and is there a confused murmur in your brain like the sound of a hard-working gas meter?"

"You've got me sized good and plenty, doc!"

"Do you have insomnia, nightmare-ness of appetite, chills and fever and concealed inspiration in the carolina perfect?"

"That's the idea, doc!"

"When you lie on your right side do you have an impulse to turn over on your left side, and when you turn over on your left side do you feel an impulse to jump out of bed and throw stones at a policeman?"

"There isn't anything you can mention, doc, that I haven't got!"

"Ah!" said the doctor, "then that settles it!"

"Tell me the truth, doctor!" I groaned, "what is it, bubonic plague?"

"You have something worse—you have the grip," he whispered, gently.

"You see I tried hard to mention some symptom which you didn't have, but you had them all, and the grip is the only disease in the world which makes a specialty of having every symptom known to medical jurisprudence."

Then the doctor got busy with the pencil and left me enough prescriptions to keep the druggist in pocket money throughout the summer.

Later my wife came in and asked me how I felt, and when I began to discourse amiably about undertakers she put up a howl that brought the rest of the family around the bedside on a hurry call.

When I told them I had the grip each and every member of the household from Uncle Peter down to the cook began to suggest remedies, and if I had taken half they suggested they could have sold me to a junk dealer and got good money.

That evening our next-door neighbor, Bud Taylor, came in and advised me to take quinine and whisky every time I felt a shooting pain.

I took his advice, but at the end of the first hour the score was 98 to 37 in favor of the shooting pains, and the whisky had such an effect on the quinine that it made the germs jealous, so between them they cooked up a little black man who advised me to chase Bud out of the house, which I did by throwing medicine bottles at him.

That night the whisky and quinine held a director's meeting with the germs and then they wound up with a sort of Mardi Gras parade through my system.

I was the goat!

When daylight broke I was a total wreck, and I swore that the next person that said whisky and quinine to me would get all his.

After breakfast another friend of ours, Jack Gibson, blew in, and after he looked over his weary eye felt on the decanter.

Then Jack smacked his lips and whispered that the best cure for the grip was a glass of whisky and quinine every time I felt chills and fever, and he'd be glad to join me.

When loving hands picked Jack up at the bottom of the stairs he was almost insulted, but he quieted down when my wife explained to him that I was suffering not only from the grip but that I had also a slight attack of flu-jitsu.

After weeks of study devoted to the subject I have come to the conclusion that the only way to cure the grip is to stay stick until you get better.

That's what I did!

WORST CLASS OF BURGLARS

Educated Professionals Are the Smoothest and Give the Police Most Trouble.

The chief constable of Liverpool is of the opinion that education is refining the latter-day criminals, and a prominent criminologist indorses this view.

Says the chief constable in his annual report: "The burglar avoids violence whenever possible, and chooses when occasion offers more subtle forms of roguery. Bill Sykes is to be dreaded less than Raffles, and the latter is to be feared less than the accomplished scoundrel who lays far-reaching plans to swindle a whole community."

Men who 50 years ago would have been burglars or highwaymen are today bogus company promoters and well-dressed swindlers of various kinds. Their profits are enhanced and their risks diminished, and I have no doubt that this is one of the fruits of modern education.

For education, like all other things, has its dark side. An inevitable result of a little learning is to develop hypocrisy where the moral training is not commensurate with the merely intellectual culture.

"The child of to-day, whose ethical teaching is neglected and who has inherited criminal instincts, is launched on society with a better equipment for a career of crime. His education has made him sharper and fuller of devices, it gives intelligence to his fraudulent instincts and widens his radius of practice."

Criminals of this kind are the most dangerous to society because they are the most insidious.

As the twig is bent so the tree inclines. Insist on the moral and religious training of children as well as upon the purely intellectual training of children."

PRINCIPAL NEWS BUREAU.

Cobbler-Barber Who Was the Chief Medium of Information in General.

A talkative and self-important young court stenographer went with a detailed judge to one of the feud towns in the Kentucky mountains to do his part in holding a term of court.

It was a small place, relates the Saturday Evening Post, far from a railroad, and the inhabitants were all feudists of one clan or another. After a day or two at the little hotel the stenographer said to the hotel keeper: "Where's the barber shop?"

"Ain't no barber shop here," the boniface replied. "We all mostly let our hair grow."

"But can't I get shaved anywhere?" "Oh, yes, I reckon you kin. Uncle Joe down to the cobbler's shop sometimes shaves folks."

The stenographer went to Uncle Joe's and found the cobbler to be a mild-mannered old man, with flowing grey whiskers and a pale and beatific blue eye.

Uncle Joe said he could shave him and he got out a razor and a shaving mug. The stenographer sat down on a chair and leaned back. He waited in some trepidation, but the old man was skillful and gave him a good shave.

It was necessary for the young man to talk, so when the barber was on his throat he said: "Good many murders around here, ain't there?"

"Well, suh," the barber said, "we don't call them murders. Howsomever, there is some killin', if that is what you mean."

"Oh, well," said the young man, "I suppose one name's as good as another. When was the last killing?"

"A man was shot out here in the square last week."

"Who shot him?"

The barber brought the razor up on the young man's Adam's apple. "I did," he said.

"NOT SO DARNED FUNNY."

"Uncle Dave" Thought He Had Listened to Mark Twain, But He Hadn't.

Col. Armory Knox, of Texas Siftings and border ranger fame, was the first manager of the daily newspaper that ex-Gov. Douglas established at Brockton. Just before the paper was launched Mr. Douglas introduced the colonel to the Democrats of Brockton at a banquet.

Col. Knox made a little speech, in which he said that he would furnish the brains for the paper, while Mr. Douglas would furnish the money. Then he told a very good story, thus:

Old Uncle Davis went from a little village to Boston to hear Mark Twain lecture at Music hall. By mistake he got into Tremont temple and heard a discourse by Rev. Joseph Cook.

When he got home and was seated in the grocery store among his cronies, one of them asked: "Well, Uncle Dave, was that there Mark Twain funny?"

"Why, yes," drawled the old man, "he were funny, but," musingly, "he weren't so darned funny."

PROTEST ON BEHALF OF BOYS

Writer Cries Out at Martyrdom Suggested by Writer.

For the sake of the future of the race it may be hoped that the modern mother does not take half, no, nor quarter, of the modern advice placed at her disposal. Here is an authority on the rearing of the young, volunteering this recipe in a Philadelphia periodical:

"To arrest the darkening of a boy's light hair, put a half ounce of salts of tartar in the first wash water when washing, and let the child sit in the sun a good deal."

By all means let him sit in the sun. A healthy boy enjoys the sun, and if he is given to understand that he is sitting in it in order to bleach his hair the idea will fill him with rapture and he will remain motionless for hours at a stretch.

If there is anything that a boy should have for his own it is his hair—that and the freckles and scratches and blisters and stone bruises which he accumulates. His time he can't have to himself, at least he couldn't in the old days, because he had to run errands and do certain fixed stunts, called "stints" or chores. But he ought to have a clear title to his hair, surely.

If he is compelled to devote most or even a few of his waking hours to processes whereby he may wear flaxen hair that will curl prettily, he may become a thoughtful, attentive and "perfectly lovely" young man, who can pass things at an afternoon reception without spilling them, but heaven help him!

The only thing a normal, energetic boy asks to have done with his hair is to have it let alone when it isn't being clipped close to his scalp. And the talk about the first wash water! It might be supposed that the boy was being put through three washings and was to be rinsed, rough dried and hung on a line. It's a watchful mother who gets a boy with legs under him to the second wash water—Providence Tribune.

INVISIBLE LAND OF OLD AGE

Country Which Is All About the People of the Earth.

The Land of Old Age is an invisible country which is all about us. However young you are, you have been near it, and I should count you unfortunate indeed if, in the heat of the day, you had not turned into its shady by-paths and lingered a moment with its quiet dwellers. It is a very peaceful land, there is not much work there to be done, duty is rarely seen—so seldom, in fact, that sometimes those of us who have gone there to live for good feel that we have passed our time of usefulness and have moments of hot resentment that we are not out in the world doing its work for it. I feel that way myself often, and at such times make excursions outside. Always the gentle hands of my children lead me back to my own country, and I sometimes feel that the reason we resist taking up our places there is this sense that we are not allowed to come out when we wish, that we are kept prisoners—not through our own weaknesses, but because there are certain conventions as to what is suitable or unsuitable for us old people—Harper's Bazaar.

Her Secret Out.

Robert Watchorn, the commissioner of immigration, has made a sympathetic and thorough study of the immigrant types that reach New York. Discussing these types the other day, he said: "The most native are the Germans from the smaller and remoter states. They have the charmingly simple and quaint minds of children. A beautiful German girl disembarked here the other day. She was tall and strong, blue-eyed and yellow-haired. She wanted to know at once if there were any letters for her. The postmaster at the pier, after getting her name, said, by way of a joke: 'Is it a business or a love letter that you expect?' The girl faltered. 'A business letter.' 'Well, there's nothing here,' said the man after looking over the assortment.

"The girl hesitated. Then, blushing as red as a rose, she said: 'Would you mind just looking among the love letters now, sir?'"

He Owed It to Himself.

"Do you think I look well in this dress?" she asked.

"Um," her husband replied, "who made it?"

"I did, but I'm afraid—"

"My dear, I never saw you have on a more becoming gown than that one is. By Jove, you look so slim, and graceful and young that I can hardly realize we've been married seven years."

"O, Alfred, do you really mean that? I believe I'll make all my clothes after this."

As soon as he could decently get away, Alfred went out and treated himself to several of the best cigars he could find.

Mr. Masterson Answered.

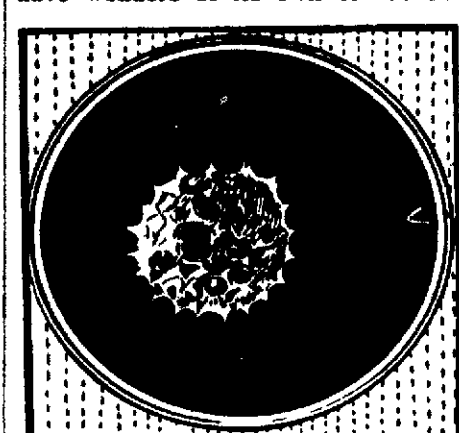

Rev. Mr. Masterson, a summer resident of Marblehead Neck, for reasons best known to himself, wears in the hottest weather a long coat and a handkerchief around his neck. Thus dressed he frequently takes long runs about town, but has decided objections to being stared at. One day recently he was running along, and, noticing a small boy gazing at him, he stopped and asked querulously: "What are you looking at?" The boy promptly replied: "I'm looking at a —a fool."

A Summer Study in the Marvels of Insects' Eggs

Wonderful World Into Which the Microscope Leads the Patient Investigator.

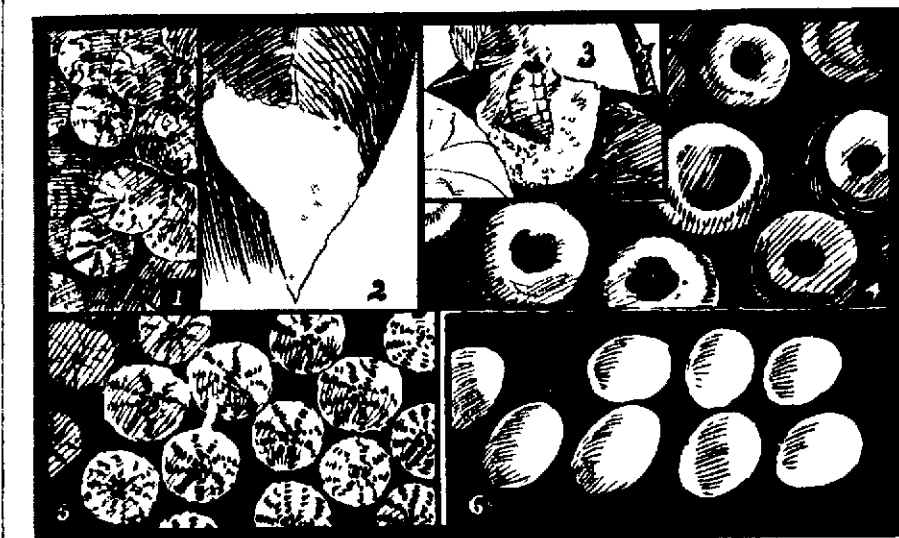

What wonders nature holds in store for the observer in the summer time. There is the world that unfolds to the naked eye and beyond it lies another world of infinitesimal beings which can only be studied and appreciated through the aid of the microscope. And with one which will magnify about 25 diameters, one can discover unexpected and novel features, and innumerable details which the unaided sight would be unable to see.

In the outdoor world, the most startling discoveries can be made, and every insect, leaf, and flower will have wonders of its own to reveal.

The pretty Egg of the White Admiral Butterfly.

Since then, minute things, all more or less marvelous, would be so abundant, we must direct our newly-endowed power of vision in some particular direction; otherwise we might be bewildered by the many novel appearances around us. Let us, for the moment, therefore, give attention to the numerous insects which move and fly so gaily amongst flowers and leaves. Let us remember, too, that before we could have this busy throng of little animals, for each one a tiny egg had to be carefully deposited in some suitable spot by the mother insect; and let us bear in mind, also, that every mother insect we now see is seeking for some fitting site in which to place her all-important ova, so that her offspring may thrive. Of course these eggs are very minute, but, with the microscope adding so greatly to our powers of sight, we are able to see these tiny objects. Where? you ask. I answer: On the leaves and stems of almost every plant that grows; for it is, indeed, a favored plant that is not the prey of one or more insects in their larval or caterpillar stage.

It is important for the reader to bear in mind the actual size of these eggs relative to other objects, and that the photographs which illustrate this article represent them very much larger than their natural size, as we should see them with the suggested increase in our power of vision, that is, they are shown in the pictures at least 25 diameters larger than their natural size.

When we have seen one egg of a butterfly we have by no means exhausted the novelty of the subject, for the next one we meet with, of another species, will prove just as entertaining an object. In fact, each species of butterfly and moth has its own characteristic form of egg, so that it is possible for one acquainted with the various shapes and designs to name the insect that each egg will eventually produce.

In one illustration we show the egg of the handsome White Admiral butterfly. Here the shell is decorated with deep hexagonal cells, which have spikes or prickles placed on their angles. These eggs are usually placed on the honeysuckle or woodbine, generally close to edge, or near the apex, of the leaves.

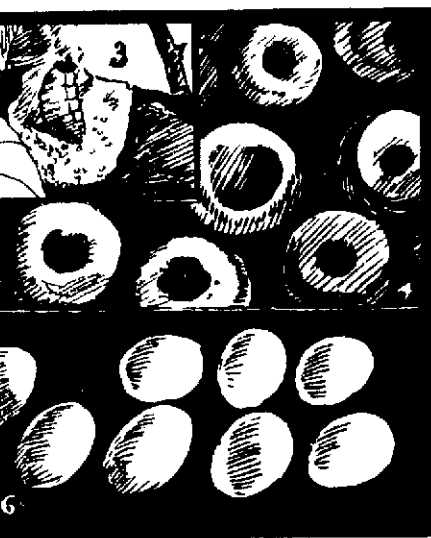

The Silver-washed Fritillary, one of the largest and most beautiful of British butterflies, also deposits an interesting form of egg and this is most frequently laid on the leaves of the sweet violet, or the unspotted dog violet.

We might consider the eggs of many other butterflies and find them equally attractive, but, as we must glance at the ova of other insects, we will turn now to moths; and here, on the leaf of this elder tree, is a good example. But, first, I want you to look at this leaf with the normal sight. (Number 2 in the large illustration.) You will notice that, on its under side, from the apex, and some distance down, the leaf is coated with a flat layer of some finely granulated substance. Then apply your microscopic eye, with its power of enlarging what you see by 25 diameters, and in the picture to the left we have depicted a portion of what you have just seen with the normal eye. That finely-granulated layer, we now see, consists of about 1,300 eggs of the common large Yellow Underwing moth, all regularly placed, side by side, and fitted, even, to the irregular cut edge of the leaf; and all, undoubtedly, laid by one insect. Moreover, almost every egg in this large batch proved to be fertile and produced a living caterpillar. Such is the extent of the progeny of the Underwing moth.

On the same elder branch, and on almost the next leaf, is another batch of about 200 eggs, of a larger size, but similar in form, though of more intricate design; some of which I have shown in illustration No. 1.

The very common Vaporer moth deposits some similar eggs, the shells of which are not thin and iridescent, like the previous examples we have glanced at, but thicker and opaque, and remind one of a porcelain pot with a lid bearing an indentation in its center (No. 4). The female insect of this species of moth is curious from the fact that she has no wings to fly with, and on that account looks like a fat grub, her large dimensions being due to the several hundred eggs she carries. When the caterpillar is about to become a chrysalis, it weaves first a silken web to cover it; and the female moth, in due course, crawls from her chrysalis on to the web, and remains there. Then, in some mysterious manner, her winged mate, while pursuing his flight, is attracted to-larvae in from a week to a fortnight after being laid.

Some of the silvery reticulated eggs of the common Currant or Gooseberry moth, whose larvae do so much damage to the trees from which it derives its popular name, are shown in No. 6.

A careful search at any time during the summer and autumn months should reveal most of these and many other equally interesting examples in season at the time.

AMERICAN INTERVENTION SEEMS TO BE INEVITABLE

Havana, Sept. 26.—All the members of the cabinet and the heads of departments have presented their resignations to President Palma. He has accepted them, but the officers will retain their positions until the resignation of the president has been presented to congress.

It is declared on very high authority that American intervention in Cuba is certain. Furthermore, it is expected that the proclamation of intervention will be issued from Oyster Bay.

The Cuban republic stands on the verge of a second period of American intervention. The moderate party which six weeks ago was in absolute control of every office in the national provincial and municipal, determined to abdicate everything and compel the United States to intervene.

In fact every government official from President Palma down is since anxious to force such intervention rather than yield to any one of the terms offered by the liberal party those in arms against the government.

The liberal leaders characterize the conduct of the government as treason to the republic, while secretary of Taft regards it as an unwarranted and dishonorable attempt to force the hand of United States into intervention. This, it has been stated, is precisely what we want and there appears nothing whatever to promise relief save full control by the United States.

LOGICAL PLATFORM FOR A REPUBLICAN NOMINEE

Oklahoma City, Sept. 26.—Henry Asp is telling the people of Guthrie that he wrote the platform that was adopted by the convention that nominated him for delegate to the constitutional convention. In view of the services Asp rendered his company in defeating all bills in the legislature of Oklahoma that was introduced for the purpose of relieving the people of the rate robbery that has been carried on for years, it would appear that the following revision will appeal to the people:

We, Henry E. Asp and the Sante Fe railway convention assembled do hereby declare that we favor a railroad and ware house commission to be elected by the people with full power to prevent us from looting the people by charging exorbitant rates. Of course we have always opposed such laws heretofore, and Mr. Asp has been able to prevent them passing the legislature of Oklahoma, but if you will let us write the constitution we will provide for those things.

We favor a law that will prevent us from discriminating or giving rebates to our special favorites in business. We have not been in favor of this before, but as something is going to be done, we want you to let us do it, and we promise anything along these lines.

We are in favor of railroads being compelled to charge the same freight and fare to every citizen and community. Of course we are not doing it now. It is true we are charging 28 cent rate on wheat from Guthrie to Galveston while at the same time we are only charging Kansas City 12 cents to the same point. We have been asked by the farmers to reduce the rate, but there being no law to compel us, we cannot do it.

We favor a provision to prevent us from owning, either directly or indirectly, coal lands, or to operate coal lands in the state. We have our own coal mines in Colorado, and if we can fix it so the other roads cannot buy up the coal lands in this state, we can still have a cinch on making people buy our coal on our lines where there is no competition.

We favor an employer's liability law which will be just both to capital and labor. It is true that Mr. Asp defeated the fellow servant law introduced in the last legislature by Mr. Noffsinger, but we will have to do something along that line, and we would rather do it ourselves than to have some one else do it for us. There are many other things we will have to do, and we promise anything you ask for if you will only send us to the constitutional convention. The Democrats are advocating the initiative and referendum, and we are willing to promise anything to keep that out of the constitution. We are afraid Henry will lose out entirely if that measure goes into the constitution, and we will be at the mercy of the people.

P. S. We are in favor of an organic law that will leave in the people themselves full power and freedom to control the state in the interest of all the people all the time. We came very nearly forgetting that.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

ARMED NEGROES ARRESTED AND PEACE IS RESTORED

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 26.—The known dead, who have met death in connection with the riots here since last Saturday night, number one white man and eighteen negroes.

The main events during yesterday were the ordering into the city of four companies of state militia from outside points. Gov. Terrell saying that the order was given as a matter of precaution rather than from any pressing necessity. The gathering of a large representation of business and professional men at noon called for vigorous action by the city executive regarding negro dives and saloons. Resolutions demanded that these places be closed and kept closed perpetually.

In these demands the leading members of the negro clergy united, promising their support of all measures for the common good and their influence with their own people.

One negro was killed at Brownville by the militia in the morning while trying to break through the lines. Two hundred and fifty-seven negroes have already been placed under arrest in Brownville. The majority of them were heavily armed. One other negro tried to get away and was shot.

The raid started shortly after 5 o'clock. The negroes were searched for arms and every one found to be armed.

Following the arrest of 257 negroes at Brownville, which includes Clark University, early in the day and the detention of about 100 of these in the county jail, the feeling prevailed that at last peace had been restored by a strong show of authority.

A Fast Afternoon.

Tuesday afternoon Broadway was a fast track despite the rough spots. First, Joe Harrington gave a thrilling exhibition of horsemanship riding a fiery, untamed, young bay. The beast did some terrific bucking and plunging, but Joe stayed on. Once he lost the reins, and onlookers cringed as the horse plunged wildly down the street. However Joe dexterously recovered the reins and took control once more. It was a genuine performance, one superior to the average wild west performance; but on the streets such exhilarating sport is a bit dangerous to life, limb and property.

Later Ingram's milk wagon team got tired of waiting at Chapman's hotel and terrorized the business section by taking a whirlwind spin down Broadway to the Frisco. The wagon's contents were dumped early in the run and other vehicles in the path narrowly escaped disastrous collision. After making a circuit of several blocks the team was caught on Main and no serious damage was reported. It is said the milk man is offering some bargains in milk shakes.

Drivers might do well to try unhitching the traces or hitching the horses.

The "crew" on this train also runs and operates the Republican party in Oklahoma. They are writing "anti-railroad platforms," hoping to fool the people.

PREPOSTEROUS.

Desperate indeed is getting the attitude of the Republican party in the new state. Republicans observe the honest men of all classes and sections—those who sincerely desire a government which will protect the people—flocking to the Democratic standard; they see the Democratic headquarters doing a noble and effective work enlightening the people on the issues of the campaign and courageously exposing Republican corruption; then observing the corresponding decline and disintegration of the G. O. P. the leaders, filled with envy and chagrin, get frenzied in their impetuosity.

In a desperate effort to counteract the repeated exposure of the G. O. P.'s intimacy with the corporate interests they are now declaring the expenses of maintaining our Democratic Headquarters and various speakers in the field are paid by the Standard Oil Company, that Standard oil is in league with the Democratic leaders to seize control of the new state. How palpably false, how ridiculous! And such an accusation to be found in the columns of the Oklahoma State Capital, the organ of the Santa Fe Railroad! Children now know that the interests of Standard oil and of the railroad trust are one. Does it stand to reason that they would fight each other in politics? The Republican party, both in the Territories and in the nation at large, has long been monopoly's trusted pal in perfidy. It is ridiculously illogical that there should come any rupture of relations at this time.

As to the source of the Democratic campaign fund, it has been made plain that it is made up of the voluntary contributions of the honest, toiling masses. Democratic speakers are holding meetings throughout the two territories and having contributions taken to pay the legitimate expense of conducting our great crusade for righteous government. Strict account of contributions are kept at Oklahoma City, where at any time the skeptical and suspicious may inspect to his satisfaction. Those who wish are contributing to this fund are expecting no return, no special privileges or immunities. All they want is a fair and equal chance, and this with reason they expect if they succeed in placing the Democratic party in power.

THE SORT OF MAN WANTED.

The Times takes pleasure in publishing in another column an interesting extract from a speech recently delivered in Ada. It is of interest to voters in the 87th district. The speech was made by Carlton Weaver, candidate for the Democratic nomination for delegate.

Editorially the Ada Democrat had urged that a candidate should be selected who would look after the "material interests of Ada." Replying thereto before an audience of his home town, Weaver boldly declared that he placed the interest of the whole district far above the local ambitions of the town of Ada.

Such an utterance, under the circumstances, required sublime courage. It is such courage as must excite the admiration of every patriotic Democrat. That's the sort of man we want, one broad enough in his sympathies to put first and foremost the vital interests of all the people. That's the sort of man the people will nominate next Tuesday.—Mill Creek Times.

ALL SHOULD WORK TOGETHER

At the present time it is the paramount duty of all southern interests to work together for the prime purpose of advancing the price of spot cotton as quickly as possible to ten cents. The whole cotton trade knows that present prices are too low. The spinners and manufacturers are generally out-spoken in their objection to such low prices as are prevailing at the present. Letters which are reaching us from the manufacturing centers of Europe clearly indicate that the spinning trade abroad anticipated the payment of much higher prices for this crop than the present market authorizes.

The Southern Cotton Association, Farmer's Union, bankers, merchants, and all business interests in the south should stand shoulder to shoulder for at least ten cents at the present time. A determined persistent stand all along the line will win success. Let everybody help and pull together. The present price of spot cotton is contracting the currency of the south and if not advanced will mean millions of dollars loss in the aggregate. The cotton Journal hopes and believes that both of the prices fixed on cotton by the two organizations named will be fully realized by those who do not rush their staple to market too fast.—Cotton Journal.

Just one more week of activity and suspense then we'll know who'll be the delegate from old 87.

"If you see a man who has a move on him step aside and don't be an obstacle in his way," observes the Pontotoc Review. Probably this is the way the lively candidate feels about it.

The advocates of joint statehood in Arizona have held a little convention, nominated a candidate for delegate and plan to make a plucky fight. But it is generally conceded to be a hopeless undertaking; that territory is overwhelmingly against the union with New Mexico.

Financing Great Cotton Corporation. Montgomery, Ala. Sept. 26—A meeting of the cotton growers of the state was held here yesterday at which President Harvie Jordan of the Southern cotton association was the principal speaker.

Addresses were also delivered by Field Agent Smith and Executive Committeeman Witherspoon of Mississippi. The chief object of the meeting was to discuss the recent resolution of the executive committee at its Hot Springs convention fixing the minimum price of cotton at 10 cents.

The necessity for a strict conformity to this resolution was urged by the speakers. It is believed that most of the growers are now in a position to hold their crops until the demands of the mills will necessitate an advance to the minimum price agreed upon.

Another important matter which came up for discussion was that of the financing of the proposed $100,000,000 corporation to handle the crops of distressed growers who are financially unable to hold their cotton. This class has always been the main obstacle to maintaining the price set by the association and it is proposed to establish warehouses where the cotton can be stored until the price advances. By this method the cotton forced upon the market can be prevented from falling into the hands of the spinners and exporters.

Meetings similar to the one held here will be held in all of the cotton states and will be conducted by President Jordan and his assistants. The itinerary is as follows: Shreveport, La., Sept. 27; Palestine Texas, Sept. 28; Taylor, Texas, Sept. 29; Waco Texas Oct. 1; Dallas, Texas Oct. 2; Sherman, Texas, Oct. 3; Oklahoma City, Oct. 4; Fort Smith Ark., Oct. 5; Pine Bluff, Ark., Oct. 6; Orangeburg, S. JOHN HENRY

ON THE GRIP.
By RUGH McHUGH
[GEORGE Y. HOBART]

"I'm Glad the Japs Put the Boots to the Czar."

Say, did you ever spar a few hot rounds with a real attack of grip?
When it comes right down to a case of being a bad boy the grip has every other disease slapped to a sit-down.
I had the grip some weeks ago and ever since my system has felt like eight cents' worth of cheese.

The medicine sharps tell us that the grip is caused by a little germ which emigrated to this country originally from Russia.
If that's the case I'm glad the Japs put the boots to the czar. I wish they would go after him again and kick his crown off.

"I'll bet even money that the father of the first grip germ must have been a bombshell and his mother was some relation to one of Kropotkin's retreats.
Its dollars to dimes that the grip germ is the busiest idea that was ever chased by a doctor.

Nobody knows just how or when the grip germs break into the system, but once they get a foothold in the epiglottis nothing can remove them except inward applications of dynamite.
The grip germ hates the idea of race suicide.

From one small germ there will arise and go forth a family the size of which was never dreamed of in the philosophy of our wise and busy president.

I don't know just exactly how they happened to warm wise to me, but a newly married couple of grip germs took a notion to build a nest somewhere on the outskirts of my solar plexus, and two hours later they had about 233 children attending the public school in my medusa oblongata; and every time school would let out for recess I would go up in the air and hit the ceiling with my topknot.

Before the next morning came all these grip children had graduated from school and after tearing down the schoolhouse the whole bunch had married and had large families of their own, and all hands were out paddling their canoes on my alimentary canal.

By nine o'clock that morning there must have been 35,000,000 grip germs armed with self-loading revolvers all trying to shoot their initials over the walls of my interior department.
It was fierce!

When the doctor arrived on the scene I was carrying enough concealed weapons to exterminate the entire Japanese army.

I'm up to one thing and that is that the Russians couldn't beat the Japs because all the national energy and vitality emigrated from St. Petersburg and came over here with the first grip germs.
If the czar of all the Russians had been a wise little father he would have encouraged the grip germs to remain loyal to their native land and then he could have sent them out to Manchuria to bite the ramparts out of Gen. Oyama instead of chasing inoffensive American citizens into the drug stores.

Well, anyway, the medicine mixer blew in, threw his saws behind the sofa, put his dip net on the mantelpiece and took a fall out of my pulse.
"Ah!" he said, after he had noted that my tongue looked like a currycomb.
"The same to you, doc," I said.
"Ah!" he said, looking hard at the wall.

"Say, doc!" I whispered; "there's no use to cut off my leg because the germs will hide in my elbow."
"Do you feel shooting pains in the cerebellum near the apex of the cosmopolitan?" inquired the doctor.
"Surest thing you know," I said.
"Have you a buzzing in the ears, and a confused sound like distant laughter in the panatella?" he asked.
"It's a cinch, doc," I said.
"Do you feel a roaring in the cornucopia with a tickling sensation in the diaphragm?" he asked.
"Right again," I whispered.

"She Put Up a Howl!"

When I told them I had the grip each and every member of the household from Uncle Peter down to the cook began to suggest remedies, and if I had taken half they suggested they could have sold me to a junk dealer and got good money.
That evening our next-door neighbor, Bud Taylor, came in and advised me to take quinine and whisky every time I felt a shooting pain.
I took his advice, but at the end of the first hour the score was 98 to 37 in favor of the shooting pains, and the whisky had such an effect on the quinine that it made the germs jealous, so between them they cooked up a little black man who advised me to chase Bud out of the house, which I did by throwing medicine bottles at him.
That night the whisky and quinine held a director's meeting with the germs and then they wound up with a sort of Mardi Gras parade through my system.
I was the goat!
When daylight broke I was a total wreck, and I swore that the next person that said whisky and quinine to me would get all his.
After breakfast another friend of ours, Jack Gibson, blew in, and after have attacked your Adam's apple and that there won't be any core?"

"Yes."
"When you look at the wall paper does your brain do a sort of loop-the-loop and cause you to mield 100 acres or double pinhole?"
"Yes, and 80 kings, too!"
"Do you feel a slight palpitation of the membrane of the Colorado madura and is there a confused murmur in your brain like the sound of a hard-working gas meter?"
"You've got me sized good and plenty, doc!"
"Do you have insomnia, nightmare, loss of appetite, chills and fever and concealed respiration in the carolina perfect?"
"That's the idea, doc."
"When you lie on your right side do you have an impulse to turn over on your left side, and when you turn over on your left side do you feel an impulse to jump out of bed and throw stones at a policeman?"
"There isn't anything you can mention, doc, that I haven't got!"
"Ah!" said the doctor; "then that settles it."
"Tell me the truth, doctor!" I groaned; "what is it, bubonic plague?"
"You have something worse—you have the grip," he whispered, gently.
"You see I tried hard to mention some symptom which you didn't have, but you had them all, and the grip is the only disease in the world which makes a specialty of having every symptom known to medical jurisprudence."
Then the doctor got busy with the pencil gag and left me enough prescriptions to keep the druggist in pocket money throughout the summer.
Later my wife came in and asked me how I felt, and when I began to discourse amiably about undertakers she put up a howl that brought the rest of the family around the bedside on a hurry call.
When I told them I had the grip each and every member of the household from Uncle Peter down to the cook began to suggest remedies, and if I had taken half they suggested they could have sold me to a junk dealer and got good money.
That evening our next-door neighbor, Bud Taylor, came in and advised me to take quinine and whisky every time I felt a shooting pain.

When daylight broke I was a total wreck, and I swore that the next person that said whisky and quinine to me would get all his.
After breakfast another friend of ours, Jack Gibson, blew in, and after he looked me over his weary eye fell on the decanter.

Then Jack smacked his lips and whispered that the best cure for the grip was a glass of whisky and quinine every time I felt chills and fever, and he'd be glad to join me.

When loving hands picked Jack up at the bottom of the stairs he was almost inhaled, but he quieted down when my wife explained to him that I was suffering not only from the grip but that I had also a slight attack of flu-jitsu.

After weeks of study devoted to the subject I have come to the conclusion that the only way to cure the grip is to stay stuck until you get better.

That's what I did!

WORST CLASS OF BURGLARS

Educated Professionals Are the Smoothest and Give the Police Most Trouble.

The chief constable of Liverpool is of the opinion that education is refining the latter-day criminals, and a prominent criminologist indorses this view.

Says the chief constable in his annual report: "The burglar avoids violence whenever possible, and chooses when occasion offers more subtle forms of roguery. Bill Sykes is to be dreaded less than Raffles, and the latter is to be found less than the accomplished scoundrel who lays far-reaching plans to swindle a whole community."

Men who 50 years ago would have been burglars or highwaymen are today bogus company promoters and well-dressed swindlers of various kinds. Their profits are enhanced and their risks diminished, and I have no doubt that this is one of the fruits of modern education.

For education, like all other things, has its dark side. An inevitable result of a little learning is to develop hypocrisy where the moral training is not commensurate with the merely intellectual culture.

"The child of to-day, whose ethical teaching is neglected and who has inherited criminal instincts, is launched on society with a better equipment for a career of crime. His education has made him sharper and fuller of devices, it gives intelligence to his fraudulent instincts and widens his radius of practice."

Criminals of this kind are the most dangerous to society because they are the most insidious.

As the twig is bent so the tree inclines. Insist on the moral and religious training of children as well as upon the purely intellectual training of children."

PRINCIPAL NEWS BUREAU.

Cobbler-Barber Who Was the Chief Medium of Information in General.

A talkative and self-important young court stenographer went with a detailed judge to one of the feud towns in the Kentucky mountains to do his part in holding a term of court.

It was a small place, relates the Saturday Evening Post, far from a railroad, and the inhabitants were all feudists of one clan or another. After a day or two at the little hotel the stenographer said to the hotel keeper: "Where's the barber shop?"

"Ain't no barber shop here," the boniface replied. "We all mostly leas our hair grow."

"But can't I get shaved anywhere?" "Oh, yes, I reckon you kin. Uncle Joe down to the cobbler's shop sometimes shaves folks."

The stenographer went to Uncle Joe's and found the cobbler to be a mild-mannered old man, with flowing gray whiskers and a pale and beatific blue eye.

Uncle Joe said he could shave him and he got out a razor and a shaving mug. The stenographer sat down on a chair and leaned back. He waited in some trepidation, but the old man was skillful and gave him a good shave.

It was necessary for the young man to talk, so when the barber was on his throat he said: "Good many murders around here, ain't there?"

"Well, suh," the barber said, "we don't call them murders. Howsomever, there is some killin', if that is what you mean."

"Oh, well," said the young man, "I suppose one name's as good as another. When was the last killing?"

"A man was shot out here in the square last week."

"Who shot him?"

The barber brought the razor up on the young man's Adam's apple. "I did," he said.

"NOT SO DARNED FUNNY."

"Uncle Dave" Thought He Had Listened to Mark Twain, But He Hadn't.

Col. Armory Knox, of Texas Siftings and border ranger fame, was the first manager of the daily newspaper that ex-Gov. Douglas established at Brockton. Just before the paper was launched Mr. Douglas introduced the colonel to the Democrats of Brockton at a banquet. Col. Knox made a little speech, in which he said that he would furnish the brains for the paper, while Mr. Douglas would furnish the money. Then he told a very good story, thus:

Old Uncle Davis went from a little village to Boston to hear Mark Twain lecture at Music hall. By mistake he got into Tremont temple and heard a discourse by Rev. Joseph Cook.

When he got home and was seated in the grocery store among his crockeries, one of them asked: "Well, Uncle Dave, was that there Mark Twain funny?"

"Why, yes," drawled the old man, "he were funny, but," musingly, "he weren't so darned funny."

PROTEST ON BEHALF OF BOYS

Writer Cries Out at Martyrdom Suggested by Writer.

For the sake of the future, of the race it may be hoped that the modern mother does not take half, no, nor quarter, of the modern advice placed at her disposal. Here is an authority on the rearing of the young, volunteering this recipe in a Philadelphia periodical:

"To arrest the darkening of a boy's light hair, put a half ounce of salts of tartar in the first wash water when washing, and let the child sit in the sun a good deal."

By all means let him sit in the sun. A healthy boy enjoys the sun, and if he is given to understand that he is sitting in it in order to bleach his hair the idea will fill him with rapture and he will remain motionless for hours at a stretch.

If there is anything that a boy should have for his own it is his hair—that and the freckles and scratches and blisters and stone bruises which he accumulates. His time he can't have to himself, at least he couldn't in the old days, because he had to run errands and do certain fixed stunts, called "stunts" or chores. But he ought to have a clear title to his hair, surely.

If he is compelled to devote most or even a few of his waking hours to processes whereby he may wear flaxen hair that will curl prettily, he may become a thoughtful, attentive and "perfectly lovely" young man, who can pass things at an afternoon reception without spilling them; but heaven help him!

The only thing a normal, energetic boy asks to have done with his hair is to have it let alone when it isn't being clipped close to his scalp. And the talk about the first wash water! It might be supposed that the boy was being put through three washings and was to be rinsed, rough dried and hung on a line. It's a watchful mother who gets a boy with legs under him to the second wash water.—Providence Tribune.

INVISIBLE LAND OF OLD AGE

Country Which is All About the People of the Earth.

The Land of Old Age is an invisible country which is all about us. However young you are, you have been near it, and I should count you unfortunate indeed if, in the heat of the day, you had not turned into its shady by-paths and lingered a moment with its quiet dwellers. It is a very peaceful land; there is not much work there to be done; duty is rarely seen—so seldom, in fact, that sometimes those of us who have gone there to live for good feel that we have passed our time of usefulness and have moments of hot resentment that we are not out in the world doing its work for it. I feel that way myself often, and at such times make excursions outside. Always the gentle hands of my children lead me back to my own country; and I sometimes feel that the reason we resist taking up our places there is this sense that we are not allowed to come out when we wish, that we are kept prisoners—not through our own weaknesses, but because there are certain conventions as to what is suitable or unsuitable for us old people.—Harper's Bazaar.

Her Secret Out.

Robert Watchorn, the commissioner of immigration, has made a sympathetic and thorough study of the immigrant types that reach New York. Discussing these types the other day, he said: "The most naive are the Germans from the smaller and remoter states. They have the charmingly simple and quaint minds of children. A beautiful German girl disembarked here the other day. She was tall and strong, blue-eyed and yellow-haired. She wanted to know at once if there were any letters for her. The postmaster at the pier, after getting her name, said, by way of a joke: 'Is it a business or a love letter that you expect?' The girl faltered: 'A business letter.' 'Well, there's nothing here,' said the man after looking over the assortment.

"The girl hesitated. Then, blushing as red as a rose, she said: 'Would you mind just looking among the love letters now, sir?'"

He Owed It to Himself.

"Do you think I look well in this dress?" she asked.
"Um," her husband replied, "who made it?"
"I did, but I'm afraid—"

"My dear, I never saw you have on a more becoming gown than that one is. By Jove, you look so slim, and graceful and young that I can hardly realize we've been married seven years."

"O Alfred, do you really mean that? I believe I'll make all my clothes after this."

As soon as he could decently get away Alfred went out and treated himself to several of the best cigars he could find.

Mr. Masterson Answered.

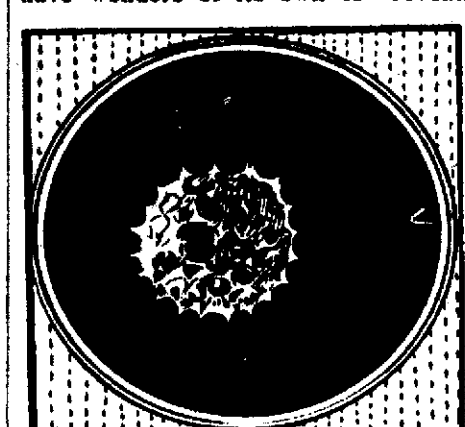

Rev. Mr. Masterson, a summer resident of Marblehead Neck, for reasons best known to himself, wears in the hottest weather a long coat and a handkerchief around his neck. Thus dressed he frequently takes long runs about town, but has decided objections to being stared at. One day recently he was running along, and noticing a small boy gazing at him, he stopped and asked querulously: "What are you looking at?" The boy promptly replied: "I'm looking at a 4-a fool."

A Summer Study in the Marvels of Insects' Eggs

Wonderful World Into Which the Microscope Leads the Patient Investigator.

What wonders nature holds in store for the observer in the summer time. There is the world that unfolds to the naked eye and beyond it lies another world of infinitesimal beings which can only be studied and appreciated through the aid of the microscope. And with one which will magnify about 25 diameters, one can discover unexpected and novel features, and innumerable details which the unaided sight would be unable to see.

In the outdoor world, the most startling discoveries can be made, and every insect, leaf, and flower will have wonders of its own to reveal.

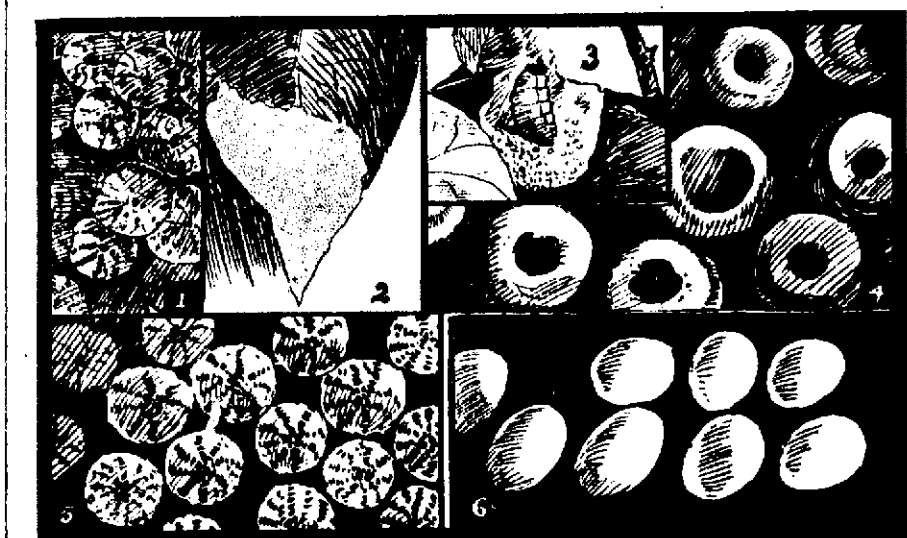

The pretty Egg of the White Admiral Butterfly.

Since then, minute things, all more or less marvelous, would be so abundant, we must direct our newly-endowed power of vision in some particular direction; otherwise we might be bewildered by the many novel appearances around us. Let us, for the moment, therefore, give attention to the numerous insects which move and fly so gaily amongst flowers and leaves. Let us remember, too, that before we could have this busy throng of little animals, for each one a tiny egg had to be carefully deposited in some suitable spot by the mother insect; and let us bear in mind, also, that every mother insect we now see is seeking for some fitting site in which to place her all-important ova, so that her offspring may thrive. Of many other butterflies and find them equally attractive, but, as we must glance at the ova of other insects, we will turn now to moths; and here, on the leaf of this elder tree, is a good example. But, first, I want you to look at this leaf with the normal sight. (Number 2 in the large illustration). You will notice that, on its under side, from the apex, and some distance down, the leaf is coated with a flat layer of some finely granulated substance. Then apply your microscopic eye, with its power of enlarging what you see by 25 diameters, and in the picture to the left we have depicted a portion of what you have just seen with the normal eye. That finely-granulated layer, we now see, consists of about 1,300 eggs of the common large Yellow Underwing moth, all regularly placed, side by side, and fitted, even, to the irregular cut edge of the leaf; and all, undoubtedly, laid by one insect. Moreover, almost every egg in this large batch proved to be fertile and produced a living caterpillar. Such is the extent of the progeny of the Underwing moth.

On the same elder branch, and on almost the next leaf, is another batch of about 200 eggs, of a larger size, but similar in form, though of more intricate design; some of which I have shown in illustration No. 1.

The very common Vapourer moth deposits some similar eggs, the shells of which are not thin and iridescent, like the previous examples we have glanced at, but thicker and opaque, and remind one of a porcelain pot with a lid bearing an indentation in its center (No. 4). The female insect of this species of moth is curious from the fact that she has no wings to fly with, and on that account looks like a fat grub, her large dimensions being due to the several hundred eggs she carries. When the caterpillar is about to become a chrysalis, it weaves first a silken web to cover it; and the female moth, in due course, crawls from her chrysalis on to the web, and remains there. Then, in some mysterious manner, her winged mate, while pursuing his flight, is attracted to-course these eggs are very minute, but, with the microscope adding so greatly to our powers of sight, we are able to see these tiny objects. Where? you ask. I answer: On the leaves and stems of almost every plant that grows; for it is, indeed, a favored plant that is not the prey of one or more insects in their larval or caterpillar stage.

It is important for the reader to bear in mind the actual size of these eggs relative to other objects, and that the photographs which illustrate this article represent them very much larger than their natural size—as we should see them with the suggested increase in our power of vision; that is, they are shown in the pictures at least 25 diameters larger than their natural size.

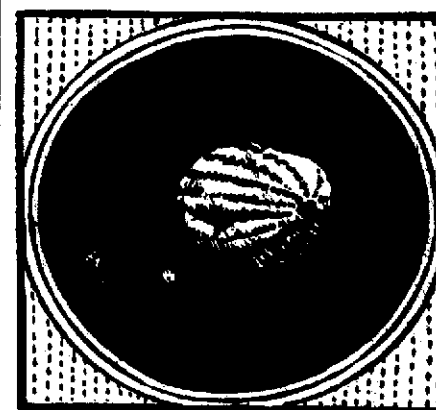

When we have seen one egg of a butterfly we have by no means exhausted the novelty of the subject, for the next one we meet with, of another species, will prove just as entertaining an object. In fact, each species of butterfly and moth has its own characteristic form of egg, so that it is possible for one acquainted with the various shapes and designs to name the insect that each egg will eventually produce.

In one illustration we show the egg of the handsome White Admiral butterfly. Here the shell is decorated with deep hexagonal cells, which have spikes or prickles placed on their angles. These eggs are usually placed on the honeysuckle or woodbine, generally close to edge, or near the apex, of the leaves.

The Silver-washed Fritillary, one of the largest and most beautiful of British butterflies, also deposits an interesting form of egg and this is most frequently laid on the leaves of the sweet violet, or the unspotted dog violet.

We might consider the eggs of wards her. She never moves from her place on the outside of the web that covers the cocoon, but deposits her batch of eggs about it, and then she dies amongst them. In the upper part of the illustration the female moth will be seen depositing her eggs—both moth and eggs being here shown of natural size. The eggs are laid about August, or later in the year, and remain as eggs throughout the winter and spring, hatching their larvae about the following June; differing in this way from all the previous examples shown, which produce their larvae in from a week to a fortnight after being laid.

Some of the silvery reticulated eggs of the common Currant or Gooseberry moth, whose larvae do so much damage to the trees from which it derives its popular name, are shown in No. 6.

A careful search at any time during the summer and autumn months should reveal most of these and many other equally interesting examples in season at the time.
